Two companies, one promise:
Helping you save time and money... and build your ministry too!

Sam Beatty likes the old Greyhound slogan, "Leave the driving to us!" "It was a great concept because it encouraged people to focus their attention on more enjoyable parts of their trip - like the views, reading or just chatting - without the burden of responsibility," he says. "That's our philosophy about computers and network systems. We help consumers, businesses, and non-profit organizations focus on using technology seamlessly - to maximize productivity, increase efficiency, get more accomplished with less, and improve network and internet connection security and reliability."

Technology can be your best friend and ally, like the small rock David used with his sling to slay Goliath. When properly sized and functioning, the correct technology can move mountains quickly, without the expense of a larger staff, including the related office space and associated overhead costs. Effectively combining your computer with today's Internet technology can make a huge impact on freeing up your time and the real costs of driving a vehicle around to find something you need to purchase. In other words, using technology to leverage your time and resources to the greatest extent possible and "leaving the problems associated with technology to us" will let you focus on growing whatever God has created you to do, spending your precious time and financial resources on the right things.

Automation Concepts Company corporate computer and network specialists

While large companies usually have an entire division dedicated to Information Technology (IT), small and medium-sized organizations often rely on an outside technology partner to evaluate, service, and fulfill these needs. Automation Concepts Company (ACC) is an established, Front Range technology company specializing in corporate computing and network systems. For fourteen years, the team at ACC has supplied a wide variety of products and services to companies doing business on local and national levels. ACC's offerings include computer systems; software; network design and installation; high-speed Internet solutions; communication systems (voice, data, and video); remote access solutions; server design and implementation; ongoing service agreements; Internet and Web solutions, along with the critical management component that pulls and "glues" together all these pieces of the IT puzzle. The company is partnered with top-tier IT equipment,
