

How could I tell the children their beloved Pawpaw was dying? How could I process my own shock and grief?

Balloons to Pawpaw

Shocked at the sudden news that her father had only weeks to live, Susan Alexander was trying to process her grief when it hit her: she wasn't just losing a dad, but a grandfather to her kids. How would she tell little Grant and Cara that their beloved Pawpaw was dying?

Balloons to Pawpaw is Susan's inspirational account of her father's final weeks and how she used that time to strengthen her faith and her family. As she details each heart-wrenching experience, Susan gently shows how to enhance your last days with a terminally ill loved one. Even more, she provides numerous ideas for helping children comprehend and accept the debilitation and death of someone close to them. Carefully chosen scriptures provide a biblical basis for each story.

To order this inspirational book,
call toll free (877) 421-READ (7323)
or go to www.pleasantwordbooks.com

Susan Alexander worked as an occupational therapist—with extensive pediatric experience—for twelve years until she switched paths to become a stay-at-home mom to her two young children. She holds a MA in human relations from the University of Oklahoma and a BS in occupational therapy from the University of Central Arkansas. Susan lives in Colorado Springs with her husband, Mark and their two children, Grant and Cara. To contact Susan for speaking engagements, questions/comments, you may email her at balloonstopawpaw@gmail.com or call (719) 282-8656.

